U.N. condemns N. Korea detonation as 'a clear violation'

UNITED NATIONS | The U.N. Security Council swiftly condemned North Korea's nuclear test on Monday as "a clear violation" of a 2006 resolution banning them and said it will start work immediately on a new measure that could result in stronger measures against the reclusive nation.

Hours after North Korea defiantly conducted its second test, its closest allies, China and Russia, joined Western powers and representatives from the rest of the world on the council to voice strong opposition to the underground explosion.

After a brief emergency meeting held at Japan's request, the council demanded that North Korea abide by two previous resolutions, which, among other things, called for Pyongyang to return to six-party talks aimed at eliminating its nuclear program. It also called on all other U.N. member states to abide by sanctions imposed on the North.

U.S. Ambassador Susan Rice said the 15-member council agreed that work on the new resolution will begin Tuesday.

"What we heard today was swift, clear, unequivocal condemnation and opposition to what occurred," she said. "The United States thinks that this is a grave violation of international law and a threat to regional and international peace and security, and, therefore, the United States will seek a strong resolution with strong measures."

Lobsters Die So Record May Live

A team of culinary whizzes in Maine plan to combine 45 pounds of lobster meat, 4 gallons of Miracle Whip and a special blend of seasonings into a mix that will be slathered onto a 60-foot roll — so large it will be brought in on a flatbed truck. The lobster roll is to be unveiled June 7 during a festival in Portland. It will be cut into sections that will be sold as part of a fundraiser for a neighborhood association, which intends to get the roll certified by Guinness World Records. (AP)

In a country where ghosts are traditionally believed to hide in the loo, a Japanese company is advertising a new literary experience — a horror story printed on toilet paper. Each roll carries several copies of a new nine-chapter novella written by Koji Suzuki, the author of the horror story "Ring," which has been made into movies in both Japan and Hollywood. "Drop," set in a public restroom, takes up about three feet of a roll and can be read in just a few minutes, according to the manufacturer, Hayashi Paper. (AP)

U.S. Options Limited on N. Korea

Nuclear test adds yet another international challenge for Obama

WASHINGTON | North Korea's nuclear test makes it no likelier that the regime will actually launch a nuclear attack, but it adds a scary dimension to another threat: the defiant North as a facilitator of the atomic ambitions of others, potentially even terrorists.

It presents another major security crisis for President Obama, who is already saddled with wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, and a nuclear problem with Iran. He said Monday the U.S. and its allies must "stand up" to the North Koreans, but it's far from clear what diplomatic or other action the world community will take.

So far, nothing they've done has worked.

At an earlier juncture of the long-running struggle to put a lid on North Korea's nuclear ambitions, the administration of former President Bill Clinton in the mid-1990s discussed with urgency the possibility of taking military action. That seems less likely now, with the North evidently armed with nuclear weapons and the international community focused first on continuing the search for a nonmilitary solution.

The North's announcement that it conducted its second underground test of a nuclear device drew quick condemnation around the globe. The Obama administration, which said the North's action invited stronger, unspecified international pressure, has consistently called for Korean denuclearization but seemed not to have anticipated a deepening nuclear crisis.

Just two weeks ago, the administration's special envoy for disarmament talks with North Korea, Stephen Bosworth, said during a visit to Asian capitals that "everyone is feeling relatively relaxed about where we are at this point in the process." If so, they are no longer. ROBERT BURNS (AP)

Chemo-Fleeing Boy Is Back

Mom's arrest warrant is lifted in Minn.; teen is evaluated by doctor

NEW ULM, MINN. | A woman and her 13-year-old son who were on the run from court-ordered cancer treatment for the boy returned to Minnesota voluntarily early Monday, Brown County Sheriff Rich Hoffmann said.

Colleen Hauser and her son, Daniel, arrived in New Ulm at 3 a.m. by charter flight and the boy was "immediately checked over medically," Hoffmann said. The sheriff did not say where the pair have been since they missed a court hearing last Tuesday, or whether Daniel received medical treatment for his Hodgkin's lymphoma while they were gone.

Because Colleen Hauser returned voluntarily, a warrant for her arrest was lifted.

Daniel Hauser has Hodgkin's lymphoma, a disease that doctors say has a 90 percent chance of being cured in children if treated with chemotherapy and radiation. Daniel underwent one round of chemotherapy in February but stopped after that single treatment, citing religious beliefs.

A judge ruled that the parents medically neglected Daniel and ordered them to get him an updated chest X-ray. After the X-ray showed a tumor in Daniel's chest had grown, the mother and son left town. PATRICK CONDON (AP)

Economy Sparks Survival Hoarding

Americans spooked by the financial crisis stock up on supplies

SAN DIEGO | Six months ago, Jim Wiseman didn't even have a spare nutrition bar in his kitchen.

Now, the 54-year-old businessman has a backup generator, a water filter, a grain mill and a 4-foot-tall pile of emergency food tucked in his home in the expensive San Diego suburb of La Jolla.

Wiseman isn't alone. Emergency supply retailers and military surplus stores nationwide have seen business boom in the past few months as an increasing number of Americans spooked by the economy rush to stock up on gear that was once the domain of hardcore survivalists.

These people snapping up everything from water purification tablets to thermal blankets shatter the survivalist stereotype: They are mostly urban professionals.

ITEMS IN DEMAND

- 55-gallon water jugs
- Waterproof containers
- Freeze-dried foods
- Water filters
- Glow sticks
- Lamp oil
- Thermal blankets
- Dust masks
- Tents

From teachers to real estate agents, budding emergency gurus say the dismal economy has made them prepare for financial collapse as if it were an oncoming hurricane. They worry about rampant inflation, runs on banks, bare grocery shelves and power failures.

"The UPS guy drops things off and he sees my 4-by-8-by-6-foot pile of food and I say, 'What are you doing to prepare, buddy?'" Wiseman said. "Because there won't be a thing left on any shelf ... if people's confidence wavers."

Ocean Grave Awaits Ship

Massive WWII craft to be turned into an artificial reef in Fla.

KEY WEST, FLA. | Aboard the Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, a massive World War II ship last used by the U.S. Air Force to track missiles and spacecraft, it's anything but business as usual.

Crews are preparing the decommissioned ship for sinking Wednesday seven miles off Key West, where it will become one of the world's biggest man-made reefs. Explosives attached to the ship's hull beneath the water level will be detonated to open it for flooding, which should quickly send it to the sea floor. The 17,000-ton, 523-foot-long ship will be sunk on a sandy bottom in about 140 feet of clear water.

It's a project that has been years in the making.

The cost is about $8.6 million, from acquiring the ship to cleaning it. Officials in the Florida Keys expect it to pay dividends of up to $8 million in annual tourism-related revenue, mostly from divers flocking to get a look at the underwater spectacle.

The idea is to not only attract tourists, but also to help protect the Keys' natural reefs, which are already suffering from excessive diving, snorkeling and fishing along with warming ocean temperatures. The Vandenberg will become the world's second-largest intentionally sunk artificial reef.

Pyongyang Defies World Powers

N. Korea tests nuclear bomb comparable to those used in WWII

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA | North Korea defied world powers and carried out an underground test Monday of a nuclear bomb Russian officials said was comparable to those that obliterated Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The incident drew condemnation from Washington to Beijing, as well as from the U.N. Security Council, which said the test was a clear violation of its resolutions.

Protesters in Seoul, South Korea, participate in a rally against North Korea on Monday, as North Korea announced it had carried out a test of a nuclear bomb.

British Prime Minister Gordon Brown called the test a "danger to the world." Russia's Foreign Ministry called it "a serious blow" to efforts to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons. Even traditional Pyongyang ally China said it was "resolutely opposed" to the test, which Russian officials estimated yielded a 10- to 20-kiloton blast — enough to flatten a city.

Last month, Pyongyang launched a rocket despite calls for restraint, abandoned nuclear negotiations, and warned it would carry out the atomic and long-range missile tests. JEAN H. LEE (AP)

MEASURES OF 'SUCCESS'

Monday's nuclear test was described as "successful" by the Korean Central News Agency.

→ The explosion created a 4.7-magnitude tremor, the U.S. Geological Survey said — 10 to 20 times more powerful than its first test, in 2006, which produced a 3.58-magnitude tremor.

→ In South Korea, the blast was recorded as a 4.5-magnitude quake.

→ Emergency sirens reportedly sounded in Yanji, China, 130 miles from the blast, Dailymail.co.uk said.

Scientologists Go On Trial in France

Group, 7 leaders are charged with fraud, illegal drug activity

PARIS | The Church of Scientology could be dissolved in France if it is convicted in a trial that opened Monday in Paris, where the group and seven of its French leaders are charged with organized fraud and illegal pharmaceutical activity.

The group, considered a sect in France, has faced prosecution in many countries.

The trial comes more than a decade after one of the three plaintiffs originally filed a complaint against the Church of Scientology. A woman said she spent $29,400 on books, courses and "purification packages" after being recruited

"For each person who complains, we have 100,000 ready to say nothing but good things about scientology," Agnes Bron, an official of the French organization, said before the trial, which is expected to last until June 17.

Austria Attack Sparks India Riots

Sermon is suspected reason for shooting at Sikh temple in Vienna

VIENNA | Investigators believe a sermon at a Sikh temple set off an attack that saw worshippers use a frying pan and microphone stands to fend off knife- and gun-wielding assailants who fatally shot a cleric, police said Monday.

The death sparked riots in several northern Indian cities.

Witnesses said the Vienna temple attended by lower-caste Sikhs was attacked Sunday by Sikhs from a higher caste who accused one or both of the preachers of being disrespectful of the religion's Holy Book.

The attack set off a brawl that wounded 16. Police said they found a 9 mm pistol and several knives at the scene. It was unclear whether some were kirpans — ceremonial

Two preachers — identified by Indian diplomats as Sant Niranjan Das and Sant Rama Nand — underwent operations for gunshot wounds. Nand died around midnight.

In India, hundreds of people responded to the attack by defying a curfew and army patrols, attacking police stations and setting fire to the car of a senior officer and several trains. VERONIKA OLEKSYN (AP)

No Holiday Controversy for Obama

President sends gift to African American Civil War Memorial

WASHINGTON | President Obama avoided a racial controversy on his first Memorial Day in office by sending wreaths to separate memorials for Confederate soldiers and for blacks who fought against them during the Civil War.

Last week, a group of about 60 professors petitioned the White House, asking the first black U.S. president to break tradition and not memorialize military members from the Confederacy, the group of Southern states that supported slavery.

"The Arlington Confederate Monument is a denial of the wrong committed against African-Americans by slave owners, Confederates and neo-Confederates, through the monument's denial of slavery as the cause of secession and its holding up of Confederates as heroes," the petitioners said.

President Obama participates in a wreath-laying ceremony with Maj. Gen. Richard J. Rowe Jr. at Arlington National Cemetery Monday.

"This implies that the humanity of Africans and African-Americans is of no significance."

The White House ignored the request.

Obama laid a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery, a customary presidential undertaking on Memorial Day. He also had one sent to the Confederate Memorial there, a traditional practice but not well publicized.

Obama also took the unprecedented step of sending a wreath to the African American Civil War Memorial in Washington's historically black U Street neighborhood.

That memorial — to the 200,000 blacks who fought for the North during the Civil War — had been mentioned as a compromise in recent days. (AP)

Region's airports report fewer flights due to economic crisis

WASHINGTON | The Washington region's three major airports are reporting fewer passengers and departing flights due to the global economic crisis.

The number of passengers at Washington Dulles International Airport dipped 10.2 percent in March, compared to a year ago.

At Reagan National Airport, there was a 8.5 percent decrease that month. And at Baltimore-Washington International Thurgood Marshall Airport, 7.5 percent fewer passengers boarded planes.

Airport managers say that although most airlines are still serving major cities, some have eliminated routes, used smaller planes and reduced the number of flights. (AP)

Rhee Upset With DCPS Budget Cut

WASHINGTON | D.C. Schools Chancellor Michelle Rhee is attempting to change the D.C. Council's decision to strip $27.5 million from the city's schools in the upcoming budget.

Council members have said they're skeptical of projections that enrollment will grow by 3,000 students next year. The money diverted from the budget has been set aside pending an audit of the projected school enrollment in the fall.

Meanwhile, Rhee is lobbying members individually and focusing on local school budgets for cuts in case the $27.5 million reduction stands.

She says her projections are backed by a study commissioned from three think tanks. Although completed weeks ago, its results weren't given to the council while it discussed the school budget, which council member Mary Cheh criticized. (AP)

Car Company Feels the Pressure

Automobiles that use compressed air could be the next big thing

NEW YORK | Most car companies are racing to bring electric vehicles to the market. But one startup is skipping the high-tech electronics, making cars whose energy source is pulled literally out of thin air.

Zero Pollution Motors is trying to bring a car to U.S. roads by early 2011 that's powered by a combination of compressed air and a small conventional engine.

ZPM Chief Executive Shiva Vencat said the ultimate goal is a price tag between $18,000 and

Guy Negre, CEO of Motor Development International, poses next to an AirPod, a car that runs on a compressed air-powered engine, at MDI's headquarters in France.

$20,000, fuel economy equivalent to 100 miles per gallon and a tail-pipe that emits nothing but air at low enough speeds.

As Vencat spells it out, the "air cars" plug into a wall outlet, allowing an on-board compressor to pressurize the car's air tank to 4,500 pounds per square inch. It takes about four hours to get the tank to full pressure, and then the air is released gradually to power the car's pistons.

Engineering experts are skeptical of the air compression technology, which they call inefficient.

Elsewhere in the world, the technology is already gaining speed. The French startup Motor Development International, which licensed the technology to ZPM, unveiled a new air-powered car at the Geneva Auto Show in March. Airlines KLM and Air France are starting to test the bubble-shaped AirPod this month for use as transportation around airports.

Engineering experts, however, are skeptical of the technology, saying it is clouded by the caveat that compressing air is notoriously energy intensive.

"Air compressors are one of the least efficient machines to convert electricity to work," said Harold Kung, professor of chemical and biological engineering at Northwestern University. "Why not use the electricity directly, as in electric cars? From an energy utilization point of view, the compressed [air] car does not make sense."

The seven-game skid is Toronto's longest since last June.

Guthrie (4-4) gave up seven hits, walked one and struck out four. The right-hander failed to retire the side in order but permitted only three runners to reach second base after giving up a first-inning run.

Danys Baez worked the eighth and George Sherrill got three outs for his 10th save. Sherrill has not allowed a run in nine appearances since May 2 in Toronto.

Brian Tallet (2-3) gave up two runs and seven hits over six innings for the Blue Jays. The left-hander has a 2.81 ERA over his last five starts, yet is 1-2 over that span.

After Tallet left, former Oriole B.J. Ryan gave up two runs in the seventh to put Toronto in a 4-1 hole. (AP)

Red Wings Look To Avoid Game 6

NHL PLAYOFFS | The Detroit Red Wings had 3-1 series leads twice in the playoffs last year and failed to advance on home ice either time. However, Detroit did beat the Pittsburgh Penguins to win the Stanley Cup after eliminating the Dallas Stars. Both series ended in Game 6 on the road.

Banged-up Detroit is looking to close out Chicago in Game 5 on Wednesday.

The defending champions would like to make things a little easier on themselves Wednesday night against the Chicago Blackhawks in Game 5 of the Western Conference finals.

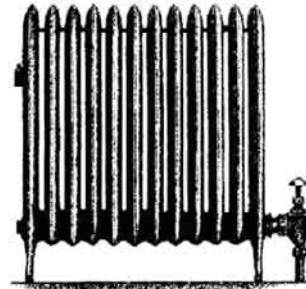

"You want to finish it as soon as you can," Detroit defenseman Brian Rafalski said Monday, a day after the Red Wings beat Chicago 6-1 in Game 4. "Obviously, we have some banged-up bodies."

MVP finalist Pavel Datsyuk

(foot) has missed two games, six-time Norris Trophy-winning defenseman Nicklas Lidstrom (lower-body injury) was a surprise scratch Sunday, and four-time Cup-winning forward Kris Draper (lower body) missed Game 4, too.

Detroit hopes Datsyuk and Lidstrom will be back Wednesday but ruled out Draper for Game 5. (AP)

Central air conditioning

for homes with hot water or steam radiator heat.

If a home doesn't have forced air heat, installing ductwork for central air conditioning can mean major remodeling and expense. But a Unique Indoor Comfort system doesn't require large metal ductwork or major remodeling. Cool air is delivered through small 2" flexible metal tubing that can easily be woven through walls and ceilings, around studs and other obstacles. All that's visible are small round outlets in every room. What's more, Unique Indoor Comfort offers Lennox high efficiency equipment. Proven in thousands of homes, easy to install Unique Indoor Comfort is the central air conditioning solution for the older home.

GOT ISSUES? DR. ANDREA BONIOR WILL HELP YOU SORT THEM OUT

Father Thinks Young; Child Thinks 'Gross'

Q My dad is going through a midlife crisis and has become a male cougar, dating someone close to my age. I love my dad, but this terrifies me, considering his new girlfriend could pass as my sister. I see my dad again in a couple weeks. How do I confess that I know about this? — ICK

I don't know. How DO you know about this? I'm betting honesty is the best policy, unless the answer involves something like peeking around in his underwear drawer. As for your discomfort, feel free to get some space at first, but if they get more serious, you'll need to be able to pry your mind open about the situation — so, don't close it too tightly.

BENDPENDENT.COM

A Dangerous Engagement

Q A few months ago, I proposed to my girlfriend of three years. I wasn't exactly itching to, but I took the plunge as a way of telling her that I'm committed. But when a friend asked whether this was really what I wanted, my best answer was a feeble "I guess so," and now I can't get this out of my head.

We're both in our mid-20s, and this is the first long-term relationship for both of us. Lately, there's been this underlying bitterness between us that surfaces with very little provocation. I know she loves me and wants to get married, and it's me who's the indecisive one. My friends who are in relationships all seem to be so much more settled about it, more in love than I am. Why can't we like each other more? When I've actually thought through breaking up, the worst is the idea that we've both wasted time. Just thinking about the kind of energy it would take to build a relationship with someone else, and probably end up in the same situation, leaves me depressed. Additionally, I'd feel guilty for leaving her right now. — HELP?

You don't propose to "show you're committed" — that's for things like serving her soup when she's sick, and not ogling the waitress. You propose because you are absolutely certain that you want her by your side until — and during — your very last gasp.

I think you know the answer here. I'm rarely this strong-minded (especially when I haven't yet had my Tabasco), but she and you shouldn't be engaged, at the very least right now, and possibly not ever. When you ask yourself "Why can't we like each other more?" just visualize asking that again and again for the next 50 years!

If you'd feel guilty leaving her now, imagine it when your lives are even more entangled — legally, emotionally, financially and socially. I see the fear of starting over with someone else, but how are you so sure it'd leave you in the same situation? Have you never seen any happy marriages?

Take the un-plunge. And here's how you feel better about your choice: by knowing you did the right thing (and the ever-reliable elixir of time).

NEW IN HEALTH warm ups

CHEW ON THIS

The concept behind Hydrive Energy Chews ($2.99 for two packs, Hydrive energy.com) is an energy drink, hold the drink. The result is a cube that looks and tastes like a gritty Starburst and has the caffeine equivalent of a half-cup of coffee, along with loads of vitamins. At least you know you can't spill it when you're sleepy.

SURVIVING THE GAME

Are Wii ready for more video game exercises? EA Sports Active ($59.99, Best Buy) is betting on it — the system adds a resistance band and leg strap to the Wii balance board, controller and remote so you can mimic a workout you'd do at the gym. There's even a virtual personal trainer and a 30-day challenge to get started.

PERPETUAL LOTION

Don't wait until you have a burn to reach for cooling aloe. If you slather on Vaseline Aloe Fresh Protecting Lotion ($5.49) ahead of sun exposure, its SPF 15 will protect you from those harmful rays while softening and scenting your skin.

DISC JOCKEYS

If you studied too hard in college, there's a chance you missed a key lesson outside the classroom: how to play Ultimate. Time to crack open "Wham-O Ultimate Frisbee Handbook" ($19.95, Cider Mill Press). Bone up on the rules and then play with the included disc.

GUINEA PIG

Let De La Soul Run the Show

■ De La Soul's musical goal has always been to make its listeners want to move. But for the first time, the trio had an added challenge: Make them want to run. For their Nike Sport Music album "Are You In" ($10, iTunes), they had to time their tracks so they would last 45 minutes, and pick up and slow down appropriately for someone on a jog.

We took it for a test drive on a treadmill and agreed immediately with the first song's line, "Good morning — this is the perfect jam to start your day." When the beat sped up at around minute 18 with the repeated lyric, "Pick up the pace," we did. And we happily kicked off our cooldown along with the music about five minutes from the end. We'd press play again even if we weren't on the run.

MAIN EVENT

The stage for "Elizabeth Keckly" stretches all over downtown D.C.

Take Three Walks To Remember

■ Last month, Prevention declared D.C. the sixth-best walking city in America. That's not bad, but we're working on improving our ranking this weekend with the spring edition of WalkingTown, DC (Culturaltourismdc.org), a free smorgasbord of more than 120 guided strolls (and six bike rides).

Sound like a workout routine you'd like to incorporate regularly? Some of the included walks are offered after this weekend, too (for a fee).

Ford's Theatre's History on Foot just launched "Elizabeth Keckly" (this Sat. at 3 p.m., and offered at various times through Aug. 28 for $12; see Fordstheatre.org). Told from the perspective of a free black woman who was Mary Todd Lincoln's pal and seamstress, participants are guided around downtown to understand how she worked her way out of slavery and into affluence.

Did you know "Before Harlem There Was U Street" ($10, Washingtonwalks.com)? Offered Saturdays at 10:30 a.m. (also this Sat. at 11:30 a.m. and Sun. at 10:30 a.m.), it focuses on the golden age of the neighborhood.

This weekend's version of "Courage: A Civil War in Washington" (Sat. and Sun. at 1 p.m.) is scaled back from the tour you can take June 20 ($10, Historicstrolls.com). But any time you do it, you'll still manage to see a new side of Penn Quarter.

Something in the Water

Dive into some new ideas for ways to work out in the local pool

Still don't think you're ready to make a splash in your Speedo? Dive into a nearby pool.

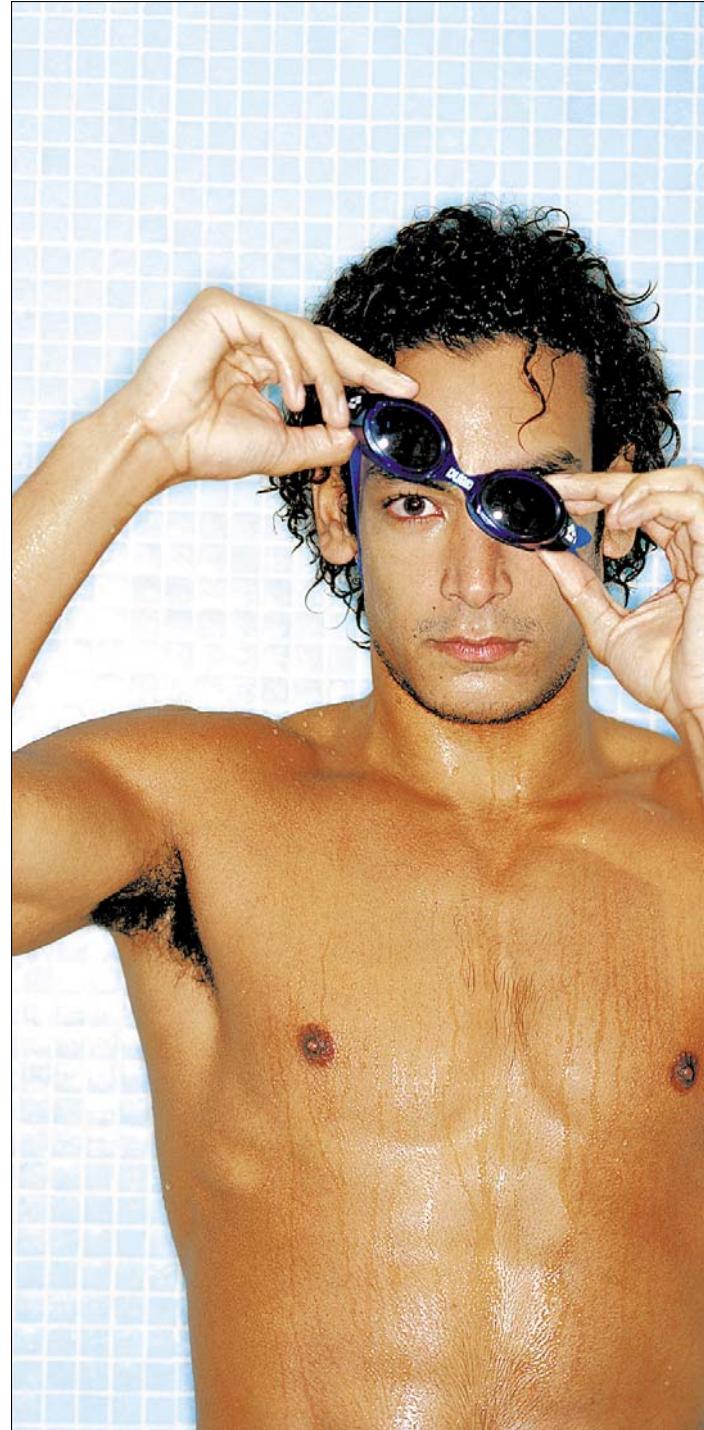

Lap swimming is an incredible cardiovascular workout, promises Monica Pampell, a trainer and swim instructor at the Sports Club/LA (1170 22nd St. NW; 202-974-6600). "The heart rate is elevated to an extent that many calories are burned, so this can promote weight loss and the building of lean body mass," she says.

If her recommendation of 20 to 40 minutes in the lanes sounds too tough, Ellen Jones, director of aquatics for the Alexandria YMCA (420 E. Monroe Ave.; 703-838-8085), advises working with an instructor on proper stroke form and breathing. Small corrections in technique can improve the efficiency of the workout.

The back-and-forth can become repetitive, so Jones reminds that there's more to swimming than freestyle. "Start challenging yourself with other strokes because that's going to work the muscles in a whole different pattern," she says. And pretend to be Michael Phelps every once in awhile — quick sprints add in calorie-burning interval benefits.

Don't have a lane to play with? Forget about laps and take advantage of the low-impact aquatic environment to incorporate other kinds of movements into your routine.

Jane Katz, a pioneering swim instructor who recently released "The W.E.T. Workout" DVD ($19.95, Drjanekatz.com), has been borrowing from Pilates, yoga, tai chi, volleyball, golf and other sports for years. Instead of playing tennis on a court, she suggests making the motion of the stroke underneath the surface of the water. Go easy on your knees and jog at the shallow end — the water's buoyancy makes the work easier on your joints, and the resistance makes it exercise.

Throw in some water tools and toys, and you've got an even more lively workout. Foam dumbbells can add resistance when you're jogging or even doing something as simple as a biceps curl underwater. (Pampell notes that you should aim for a higher number of reps than you do on land — say, 20 to 30 — to make it effective). Foam noodles are equally versatile: Use them to stretch, hit a waffle ball or help stabilize your body during Pilates-based moves such as

D.C. POOLS RULE:

→ Having a die-hard triathlete mayor seems to bode well for the city's aquatic opportunities. All 19 of the outdoor facilities opened for the summer over the weekend. And last week, the Pool Safety Council recognized the District for having the safest municipally managed public pools in the country.

Want to take advantage of these waterworks? If you're a D.C. resident, it won't cost you a dime. (Even if you're not, an adult day pass to any city pool is just $4.)

Get the full scoop on indoor and outdoor options, and city spray parks, at Dcsummerfun.dc.gov. The site also offers info on other seasonal activities.

the hundred. (Without any props, you could also try to do leg circles, corkscrews and scissors.)

Katz likes the humble kickboard for its intended purpose — as a stabilizer that allows you to improve your kick — but she also uses the board as a resistance tool underwater. The pull buoy has a similar dual use. Katz jokingly calls the figure-eight-shaped foam piece "intimate swim apparel" because it's most often used between one's thighs to stabilize the legs during laps and allow the swimmer to focus on his arms. But the pull buoy can also offer resistance if you hold one while doing a vertical exercise such as an underwater golf swing.

But even something as simple as a beach ball can help get you active in the water and, because it's a fun way to hang with friends, that can be a big incentive to keep you exercising. "We're all big babies," Katz says. "Everybody likes to play." JULIA BEIZER

Wheels Gone Wild

D.C. might just have to change its name to the District of Cycles. In honor of National Bike Month, we asked readers to send in photos of their beloved rides, and we were inundated with submissions. (Don't worry—we were wearing helmets.) Here's a collection of our favorite snapshots with some background info on their spokespeople. Peruse more pedal pics online at Expressnightout.com/trailblazer. ## Pink Streak

THERE ARE PLENTY OF reasons Capitol Hill's Randall Kling loves his Tour Easy recumbent: It's easy on his back, it reaches 54 mph, and its eye-catching spandex enclosure keeps him warm in the winter and cool in the summer. But what makes his wheels truly tops is they saved his life. After noticing a tightness in his chest while riding hard, he went to see his doc. It turns out he needed (and underwent) triple bypass surgery.

Reappearing Act

THE OWNER OF THIS BIKE would like to remain anonymous. But we've been given permission to share its story. Its life started when it was built from the frame up. Then, one fateful day in 2007, it was stolen. The owner took to the streets to get info, passed out fliers, trolled Craigslist and, with the help of other cyclists (and the Arlington police), got the bike back. "Her return represents that bikers in D.C. support each other—no matter what."

Red-Hot Ride

WHEN D.C.'S GUILLERMO GONZALEZ first saw a model of this Trek carbon race bike in a shop window, he drooled. Years later, he bought a heavily used version—it had survived several Ironman competitions—and slowly but steadily brought it back to life. "I give myself 25 cents per mile ridden to my bicycle rebuild fund," he says. Clearly, this beaut, nicknamed Enzo, has seen a lot of mileage.

Beat the Drum

WHO NEEDS A CAR to lug around a gigantic drum? Certainly not April Thompson, who's managed to live 36 years without ever owning a motor vehicle. It does help to have two baskets on her Trek hybrid, though. She can tie down her instrument to make the commute from Takoma Park to Dupont Circle. Oh, but you still want to know why she has it, right? Thompson plays in an all-female Brazilian percussion group, Batala.

A Family Affair

Plate Special

Decrease your portion size but still eat a meal that satisfies you

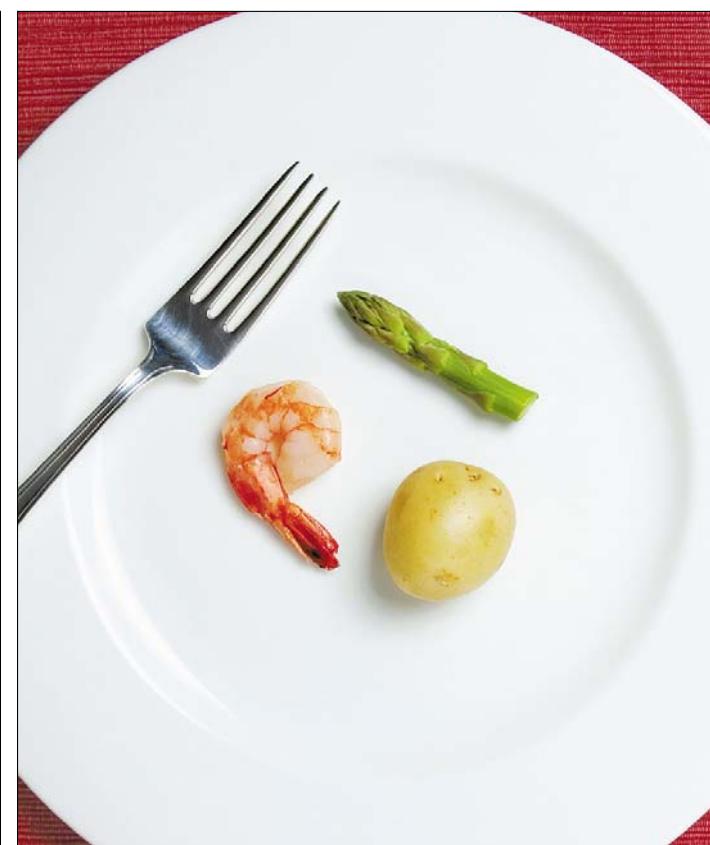

Long before McDonald's came up with "supersizing," Americans had issues with portion control. Even restaurants with healthy fare usually serve us entrees that are far larger than a reasonable meal. The logical alternatives — appetizers and those chic small plates — often aren't a much better fit, since they're usually too tiny to satisfy.

Epicurean Goldilocks who want a portion size that's just right should check out the new "medium plates" at Ardeo (3311 Connecticut Ave. NW; 202-244-6750, Ardeorestaurant.com). Ardeo's executive chef, Alex McWilliams, came up with the eight new in-between-appetizer-and-entree-size servings in April, hoping to attract a broader range of guests to the neighborhood restaurant. Less food equals less cost, so several of the new dishes are half the price of the most expensive entrees. And, of course, waistline watchers seemed like a good target, too.

While the dishes aren't designed specifically for dieters — the menu includes creamy, risotto-style grandanina pasta with foraged mushrooms and fresh garbanzo beans ($12), and charbroiled beef skirt steak with truffled asparagus frites and potato puree ($14) — McWilliams suspects they'll help diners control their calories. "The portion sizes are meant to be somewhat healthier, because our entrees are fairly large," he says.

cakes, which is the healthiest offering on the new menu.

The mid-range plates have also quickly become popular items for large tables to share, which is another way to regulate portion size. But there's no reason not to clean your own plate, McWilliams says: "If you're going out on the town later and just want a light meal, an appetizer and a medium plate seems to be perfect."

STETHOSCOPE

PAIN MANAGEMENT

This Won't Hurt a Bit

■ Have you always been curious about acupuncture but afraid of the needles? Good news: A report published in the Archives of Internal Medicine found that even when the needles didn't pierce the skin, acupuncture was more effective for lower-back pain treatment than "usual care." The authors' theory is that the non-pricking stimulation may be enough to kick off the same physiological process.

MENTAL ACUITY

Get Out, Get Smart

■ Instead of playing Sudoku to keep your brain buff as you age, put down the pencil and get out more. Researchers from the University of Manchester just published a study indicating that vitamin D helps you stay smarter in middle age and beyond. How do you get vitamin D? By exposing the skin to the sunlight. But lest everyone turn into beach bums, researchers warn that too much basking can lead to skin cancer.

LONGEVITY

Long Live Mama

■ Women in their 40s who can have children without any assisted reproduction technology are already considered lucky. Now they have another reason to thank their genes. A study out of the University of Utah, Salt Lake City, surveying historical data found that women who had babies at 45 or older lived longer than other women in their community.

Bad Accident? Hold on Tight

Stop dangerous bleeding with a DIY tourniquet and these tips

This DIY tourniquet could save your limb and spare your life — but you'd better get it right.

Know your wound

"Even for arterial wounds, applying direct pressure can slow or stop bleeding in the vast majority of cases," says emergency physician David Ross. "But in those very rare instances where nothing else will stop the bleeding, you may need to use a tourniquet."

2 Find materials

"Wider is better because it spreads out the pressure and causes less trauma to the tissues," says paramedic Connie Meyer of the National Association of Emergency Medical Technicians.

So, undo your belt or tear your shirt lengthwise, and fold it instead of rolling it. Better yet, inflate the cuff of a blood-pressure monitor until you don't feel a pulse or the bleeding slows. "This is what we use in our ambulances," Meyer says.

3 Tighten it up

Even if all you have is a belt or cloth, wrap it around the extremity one to two inches above the wound. Tighten it until the bleeding stops.

"If that doesn't work, move the tourniquet farther up the arm or leg and retighten it," Ross says.

“Even for arterial wounds, applying direct pressure can slow or stop bleeding in the vast majority of cases.”

(Unfortunately, if it's a shoulder or groin injury, there's no good location. Apply direct pressure immediately.)

4 Head to a hospital

Tissues start to die from lack of blood in four to six hours. The longer the tourniquet is on, the greater your chance of losing a limb.

5 Watch the clock

If you're approaching that dangerous four-hour mark and are nowhere near help, loosen the tourniquet slightly for a few minutes at a time, being careful not to allow the blood to start flowing at full speed.

This will allow some blood back into the tissues and may save your limb. (REPRINTED WITH PERMISSION OF MEN'S HEALTH MAGAZINE © RODALE INC.)

BRAIN POWER

How to Be a Good Grump

Complaining can be cathartic and lead to a positive outcome — for both your emotional state and the problem bugging you — as long as you go about it the right way, says Clemson University psychologist Robin Kowalski. Here is her advice on graceful griping.

→ BE STRATEGIC. Direct your complaint to someone who's really interested in hearing it. Make sure it's not always the same person — she could come to think of you as an inveterate grouser.

→ BE CLEAR. Need to vent? Say so up front ("I just need to get this off my chest — bear with me"). If your goal is to change the status quo, be sure to follow through with a new idea.

→ BE CONSTRUCTIVE. Use facts and be diplomatic. "Your mom isn't being flexible about your birthday" is better than "Your mom is always so difficult."

→ BE MODERATE. Choose your battles wisely; no matter how justified your complaint, too much kvetching is simply annoying. JULIAN KESNER (REPRINTED WITH PERMISSION OF PREVENTION © RODALE INC.)

Animated About 'Up'

Ed Asner is thrilled with his role as the lovable, grumpy old man in Pixar's latest

VOICE-OVERS | Like the curmudgeonly character he plays in Pixar's "Up," Ed Asner has always wanted to visit South America.

"That and Africa are my unfulfilled dream destinations," says the Emmy-winning actor. Work and other obligations have kept the 79-year-old from traveling to those continents. But he may get there eventually.

A renowned character actor who has entertained generations of audiences — most notably as crotchety newsman Lou Grant on the "Mary Tyler Moore Show" from 1970 to 1977 and on "Lou Grant" from 1977 to 1982 — Asner was the filmmakers' first choice for the role of Carl Frederickson, a feisty widower who embarks on a journey of self-discovery in the animated family adventure.

Director Pete Docter ("Monsters, Inc.") tapped Asner for the part of a grouchy yet lovable old man who rigs his tidy home with thousands of balloons and lifts off bound for South America. Along the way, he is joined by an unlikely trio — a persistent young scout, a talking dog and a rare bird. They gradually form a friendship but must first contend with a deranged explorer (Christopher Plummer) who wants to add the bird to his collection.

Ed Asner's character, Carl Frederickson, goes on the adventure of his life in Pixar's new movie "Up," in theaters this Friday.

Asner was surprised to get the gig in "Up," which hits theaters Friday. "I went in and read for the part, and as I left I figured, 'That's another one down the drain,'" he recalls. "A month or two later, my voice agent called and said they wanted me."

No stranger to animation, Asner has recorded for "The Simpsons," "Spiderman" and "Boondocks." He's also voiced numerous commercials and books on tape. "Up" marks the first time he has starred in an animated movie.

"I just lucked out," he says. "This film would have been great without me. I'm such a small piece of this monumental effort. My ego was deflated after the first time I saw it, and it hasn't been restored even with the second viewing."

Asner liked the film's themes of friendship, second chances and life as an adventure — values, he says, "that are hard to come by in live action."

He found common ground with his cranky on-screen character. "I don't suffer fools as easily as I used to," he admits. "It's very freeing at this age to let people know you're not going to suffer them. But at the same time, when you complain, you're easily ignored."

Method Man and Redman in 2004.

Men With Too Much To Say

Method and Red are both verbose on their new CD, 'Blackout! 2'

MUSIC | The collaboration between Method Man and Redman on the 1999 album "Blackout!" was so enjoyable that it raised the bar for any future projects between the humorous pair.

But 10 years later, the duo fail to live up to expectations on "Blackout! 2."

The new CD mainly falls short because of its length — it's overloaded with 17 tracks. The CD just seems to run too long, boring listeners with redundant lyrics and weak skits.

Where it does stir excitement are tracks that feature the rappers' taking some artistic leaps. The Southern-sounding "City Lights," featuring UGK, is a hit, as is the club-influenced "I Know Sumptn."

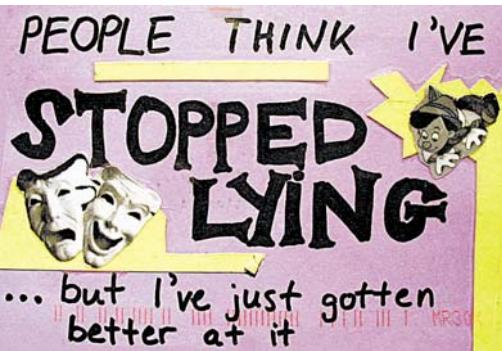

Eliminating half of the tunes on "Blackout! 2" could have easily made the CD a must-have.

BOX OFFICE Second Time's the Charm Ben Stiller's "Night at the Museum" sequel and Christian Bale's "Terminator Salvation" combined for a solid Memorial Day weekend. "Night at the Museum: Battle of the Smithsonian" took in $53.5 million from Friday to Sunday. That put it well ahead of the first "Night at the Museum" movie, which had a $30.4 million three-day opening in December 2006. "Terminator" pulled in $43 million over the same period, plus $13.4 million on opening day Thursday. (AP)

The Eccentric Doctor Is In

'Mental's' main man is a fun, spontaneous director of psychiatry

MEDICINE | In the opening moments of the new series "Mental" (9 p.m., Fox), Dr. Jack Gallagher (Chris Vance) threatens to become Patch Adams. The new director of a busy psychiatric service, Jack strips down to his birthday suit to bond with a delusional patient and gain his confidence. All of this exposure transpires before Jack has formally introduced himself to the staff, so we know he has raised a few eyebrows.

How dogged, determined and dedicated is this unorthodox doctor? He invites patients to staff meetings; he takes an entire ward to an impromptu dance; he breaks into a patient's home. He rides his bicycle to work!

Jack does a lot of things that irk his colleagues and keep his harried boss, Nora Skoff (Annabella Sciorra), reaching for the antacids. Any resemblance between Skoff and "House's" Lisa Cuddy is strictly intentional.

The most unrealistic aspect of "Mental" is Jack's willingness and ability to devote all of his working — make that waking — hours to a single patient. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

'09 XC60 crossover includes collision prevention system

PROTECTION | Sweden is a beautiful, amazing country — between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. on July 2. Otherwise, it's dark, cold, wet and deeply forlorn, a place of Norse hardship-as-honor, like the landscape of some old Led Zeppelin song.

As compared to the swelling, unrestrained fertility of, say, Missouri, life in Sweden comes hard. It must be nurtured and protected.

Recently, Volvo announced a new goal: By 2020, its cars would be so safe that no one would die behind the wheel of a Volvo. The new XC60 compact SUV includes the company's first generation of active collision prevention systems, called City Safety.

City Safety uses a laser-radar system to sweep the road ahead, scanning for stationary objects. At speeds under 20 mph, if the system senses that the driver is about to hit an object, it will engage the brakes up to 50 percent of maximum braking force.

Why have I taken you down this terribly safe and dull road?

JONATHAN FICKIES/GETTY IMAGES

The new Volvo XC60 includes an active collision prevention system called City Safety, which uses a laser-radar system to scan the road for stationary objects.

Because the Obama administration's proposed new rules for vehicle fuel economy and greenhouse gas emissions will create an impasse between our need for fuel efficiency and our desire for increasing automotive safety.

Eventually, manufacturers are going to have to take weight out of vehicles to wring more mileage out of them, and that means relying on less steel and more electronics. Volvo, which as a brand has often seemed rather linear and dowdy, suddenly looks quite avant-garde.

BY INVITATION ONLY: UPCOMING WEDDINGS &amp; UNIONS

Richard Boone, Tiffeny Dunn

Richard, 26, is a help desk analyst. Tiffeny, 26, is a human resources representative. They will live in Stafford, Va.

■ The Main Event: They'll wed in the evening on May 30 in Springfield, with 200 guests enjoying a "romantic, candlelit" atmosphere.

■ How They Met: When she was 16 and working weekends at Best Buy. She wasn't allowed to date, but they'd wait for each other in the parking lot and talk in his car when she got out of work. One day, two years later, he worked up his courage and "asked me to be his 'lady.' ... He was so nervous!"

■ First Date: After a Saturday at work, he took her to dinner.

■ How He Proposed: On their seventh anniversary, he drove her back to the same Best Buy parking lot where he first asked her out and, after reminiscing about their seven years together, surprised her with the ring.

■ Most Hated Clothing Item: "All his striped shirts. ... There are just too many colors in one shirt."

■ Pet Names: She's "Scrappie" from the movie "Rosewood." "She's such a good girl in the movie," he says.

■ Wedding Jitters: "That I or my best man will misplace the ring."

Getting Married? If you'd like to see your wedding or commitment ceremony in B.I.O., send your favorite informal photograph (wacky is fine, but please don't send a formal engagement shot), plus your names and ceremony date to weddings@readexpress.com. Please contact us at least one month before your wedding. We'll get back to you with questions.

Krystin Borgognone, Westley Vermillion

Krystin, 24, is a policy analyst.

Westley, 28, is a nuclear engineer. They live in Washington.

■ The Main Event: June 6 at a Catholic church on Capitol Hill.

■ How They Met: Krystin gave him directions when he and his friends were wandering in D.C. looking for the Brickseller.

■ First Impressions: "I knew right away that he was not from the East Coast. He told me he had a truck." "When I told her I went to LSU and she said, 'Oh, Long Island University?' I knew we were from different planets!"

■ First Date: A picnic on jazz night in the National Gallery Sculpture Garden.

■ How He Proposed: In Budapest. He'd set up rose petals, champagne and strawberries in their hotel room. "I started yelling at him for spending too much money, and Westley interrupted me." After he gave her the ring, she found a note: It read, "Thank you for the directions. I love where they have taken me."

■ Mmm, Cake: Krystin's father is an Italian baker, so the cake will come from him, all the way from New York City.

Style Goes Down the Aisle

RACHEL MOSKOWITZ met JULIUS SVOBODA at an orientation kickball game for their grad school in Madison, Wis. "He kicked the ball so hard that he popped it, which annoyed me because it ended the game. Luckily, he was wearing a cool shirt, so I decided to forgive him." But Julius' sense of style took a back-seat when he proposed last year: "I knew she's a particular person and would want to pick the ring out herself." Instead, he brought flowers and a silk ribbon. When she said yes, he tied the ribbon around her wrist.

Rachel, 28, is a government analyst. Julius, 30, is an evaluations manager. They live in D.C. and will wed June 6 in upstate New York.

The National Zoo without Tai Shan would be like Graceland without the Jungle Room: i.e., not worth the visit."

COMMENTER DIOGENES

"Devastated"? That word wasn't used to describe people even after the Sept. 11 attacks, the economic collapse, or [Hurricane] Katrina."

COMMENTER EXPRESS FAN

"Devastated" is obviously a tongue-in-cheek reference to the ridiculous popularity of those bears. I'm pretty sure you can bet that when Tai Shan leaves D.C., people will show up in droves to wish the panda well."

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

With a little luck, you can reverse the effects of any bad news you receive. Enlist the aid of a trusted friend or co-worker.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

Your understanding of a complex situation will serve you well throughout the day—and can help to shape plans for the days to come.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're likely to touch many with words of encouragement and inspiration. You must also be willing to listen to your own words.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're likely to have your perceptions colored by a twist of fate that doesn't affect you directly but colors your world.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You're not likely to respond well to criticism, so you must be ready to insulate yourself a bit. You're waiting for a big chance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Your special brand of optimism may not be completely understood by those around you, but you can communicate more than an idea.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) That which is unnecessary is not for you. You want to deal only with those things and issues that are pivotal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Accentuate the positive. Focus on that which can be done, and it will be. Don't waste time or energy on that which is impossible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Your performance under pressure can be quite admirable. Do what you can to elevate someone else even as you elevate yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You must be willing to demonstrate your tolerance for and understanding of that which is different and unusual.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may be feeling rather aimless at this time, but with a little guidance or supervision, you can surely accomplish something important.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Positive factors must be highlighted. That which you do not know should not intimidate you; you should, rather, be intensely curious.
